THEATRICAL AND OTHERWISE.

News and Comment of Stage Matters and Other Gossip.

The next attraction at the Grand will be Bartlett & May in the farce comedy "The Woman In The Case," which will be seen next Friday night, the 12th.

A matrimonial club has been formed at Wheeling, W. Va., with fifteen members. Drawings are held every six months and the member drawing the fated number must marry in six months or pay a heavy fine. If he proves that he has proposed twice and has been rejected by two ladies the fine is remitted.

Magician Kellar mystified and delighted a large audience Tuesday night at the Grand with his clever illusions and sleight-of-hand work. The growing flower trick was a pleasant surprise to the audience and many ladies carried away fine roses as souvenirs of the trick. The telepathy test was wonderful, and the several illusions were the most marvelous ever seen on the local stage. Kellar easily ranks as the best magician of the day and his performance was one of the most satisfactory that has been seen in Paris in years.

A CHILD OF ILL LUCK.

"I'm the most unluckiest child ever borned," wailed Johnnie. "Nonsense, Johnnie," said his mother, "you are a very fortunate child. You have a good home and everything you want."

"Yes, but I had the measles when the circus came," replied Johnnie, "and I never get to drown any kittens. Then I haven't got any warts to charm off, either, like Jimmie Watkins."

LOOKING INTO THE FUTURE.

"The only thing I fear," said the doomed horse thief, "is that I'll be terribly lonesome down there with Satan."

"Oh, you'll have plenty of company," observed the hangman.

"No," replied the convicted man, "all of the horse thieves, murderers and rascals who have died on the scaffold have said that they were going right straight to Heaven. There won't be any society for me."

HIS TERRIBLE TEST.

"I'm afraid, my dear," said Mrs. Mcmet, "that you have the heart disease. You must avoid shocks of all kinds."

"Nonsense," replied Mr. Mermet, "young Bortowe paid me fifty dollars that I loaned him last summer, and I didn't drop dead. I'm sure I haven't any heart trouble."

Engagement Broken Off.

A girl in Montgomery broke her engagement with one of the wealthiest young men in the county, because he had indigestion so bad he was a menace to her happiness and no good to himself. What a relief just one bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin would have been to that man, and what a boon it is to-day to many a household, where it keeps all the family in a state of health that warrants true love, confidence and happiness in the home. Try it yourself. At G. S. Varden & Co's.

OPPORTUNITY.

Fair, tall and limber-limbed, behold, she waits
Beside the stony path o'er which I wend
My anxious way, and gayly indicates
By beckonings and smiles my journey's end.
By signs she tells me that the joys I seek Await me there. With energy anew
And hope's fresh flush upon my faded cheek,
Mid cruel thorns and noxious weeds and rue
I struggle on that I may call her mine
E'er she depart as oft she hath before;
That full into my own her eyes may shine;
That I may clasp her close, all sorrows o'er.
But when I reach the spot whereon she stood
No answering word or touch is mine to know;
All echoes, from gray and lonely wood
Cold, cheerless, cutting winds upon me blow.
I weep as I recall her many charms
And fond, ambitionless, my empty arms.

One hand was played to the advantage of the officer. That was to be expected. Then another went smoothly enough in behalf of the fox, after which, though without moving, I looked sharply for the end. The method was slightly unusual, though conceived and executed with skill. They had each been in the habit of tilting back on the rear legs of their chairs as they picked up their hands and conned them. As the last card was dealt and the balance of the pack laid aside, the officer settled himself backward, while the fellow nearest me did the same thing but a second later. It was then the fine play came in. Seeming to lose his balance, to save himself from a fall he threw out a foot which caught beneath the officer's chair, sending that party over on to the broad of his back and bringing himself down on the four legs of his seat. With the rapidity of a skilled villain, I saw him draw cards from his pocket, throwing those I caught him on to the surplus pack, then slamming his false hand face down on the table, he jumped to the assistance of his companion.

The officer accepted the rough apologies offered him, and, after dusting himself with his handkerchief, played out the hand. It fell to his lot to lose, and he paid with a good grace.

As was usual, the winner proposed a parting dram and set up a loud clamor for the waiter to fetch a bottle of rum, swearing he would have no more of the like of the wine he had been drinking, the empty bottle of which stood between them on the table.

Now had the waiter been forthcoming. I would probably have less of a tale to tell. But 'twixt the heat, long hours and the present lack of custom, he had doubtless fallen asleep and was deaf to the calls given him. Anyway, after fruitless bawling by the winner, the officer took a hand in the matter by turning his attention to me, for he shouted:

"Here, ye lazy son of a bullock prick! step out and find the waiter, and be damned to you!" at the same time hurling the empty bottle at me.

The glass missile struck me fairly on the wounded arm, about an inch above where the negro's knife had entered. For an instant it gave me exquisite pain, but the sting did much to deaden the force of the blow, though it had naught to do with lessening the towering anger to which both words and bottle had brought me. In six strides I was on them, and upsetting the card-sharper, chair and all, with my open palm I dealt the naval man a blow in the face, lying him backward in the dust where he had been but a short time before.

With this my anger slipped away from me like breath from polished steel, and I saw but the comic side of the two sprawling in the dirt.

Never could I hold heat longer than a wire (though I take it as readily), and had they been quick to acknowledge the mistake that had been made, I would have cried them quits, and even joined them in a dram.

But it was not so to be. After a few seconds' bewilderment, the officer scrambled to his feet, and, pulling his sword from its scabbard, paused as though to take his bearings for an onset. He was no more than 30 years of age, carrying plenty of the marks of dissipation on him, and what with his dust-whitened clothes, his boyish proportions, and his dirty face, he looked, with his drawn sword, like a ruffled bantam.

I should have been obliged to hurl the table at him in self-defense (which would have been ill for him) had not at that moment a cavalryman on a black charger driven full tilt into the tavern yard, reining up close to us.

CHAPTER V.

A TRIANGULAR QUARREL.

I knew of no reason to fear him, but it gave me a start to recognize Scammell, in the full uniform of a captain in De Lancey's wandering tomes. He threw a quick glance about him, taking in the angry belligerent and his friend, who had picked himself up and was standing at a safe distance with his blade in his hand, as though waiting a favorable opportunity to rush in and take a part in the mess. Though I fell under the toady's eye, he did not at once recognize me, for I had my beard at about a ten days' growth, and was something more than picturesque in the shabbiness of my dress. He immediately claimed the attention of my opponent by calling him by name.

"Hello, Belden! Something put out again, eh? What the devil's the matter now? Have you not had lessons enough in your own set that you must fall afoul of pot-house loungers? What's amiss?"

"That villain has dared lay his hand on me, and, by God! he's bound to pay the penalty!" burst out Belden, for the first time finding his voice.

"Which villain?" asked Scammell, as he drew his leg over the saddle and came to be ground with the blade in the crook of his elbow. "Faith, you look as though odds were against you. I see two of them. 'Tis a good luck I had a thirst that needed quenching. On my soul, whom have we here?" he exclaimed, scowling, as with a second look he identified me. "Is it a fair quarrel, Belden? I'll weight your pockets with five pounds if you'll hand your rights to me, unless 'tis a matter of cheating at cards—What, sirrah!" he demanded, walking toward me with a malignant look to his rather fine features, "you were quick to offer me a lesson awhile since. Are you as ready to take one yourself at this meeting? How is it you have outraged my friend and your better?"

"Let them alone, yer honor!" interposed the card-sharper, approaching. "'Tis a tie cause for the both. One was hit by a bottle, the other grounded by a fist. Can't we have a trifle of fun with a hawback without interferences? Faith, the bullock man shall have my sword, an' we'll see which is the better carver! I'll back him, too, an' ye may back yer friend the popinjay, whose one merit lies in not knowing when he's well beaten. Come, now! we'll to the Kalkhook Hill (a small elevation near the Collect, a freshwater pond, which was on the site of the present tomb). The gallows used for military execution stood between it and the Fields, or present City Hall park, an' have it out. I'll—"

"What! you villain you! you low thief! Get hence, or I'll scalp you!" interrupted Scammell, turning on him. "Kalkhook Hill, you dog! You would never go so near the gallows on your own free will!"

"Gallows, is it?" returned the fellow, still holding his ground. "I tell ye, Scammell, capting though ye be, ye are riper for the gallows than am I, an' this I'll back in any way ye name."

Scammell, instead of falling on the fellow in a fury, in an act I looked for, snapped his fingers in his face, and with a look measuring him from head to foot replied contemptuously:

"You dirty dog! Mighty brave you are in the knowledge that a king's officer would ne'er cross swords with such scum. I'll give you one minute to be gone, and, failing, I'll see you tied up and lashed. If you know me so well, you know 'twill be done." And with this he turned his back on the sharper, who, far from obeying the hint to leave, stepped away but a few paces.

"And now, my wild sea bird," said the toady, directing his attention to me, "are you willing to clear yourself with my friend here? Give a fair explanation of this affair if you can, or perhaps you would like to make a fine point of the matter with me in some quiet spot. I might doubt my rights to honorably cross swords with such a you in a matter as private as this, but I will forego all objections and ask no terms. Ah! but you have an excuse; you will doubtless plead a wound."

The deep insolence of his last remark turned my dislike of the man to a sudden hatred. 'Twas not the words, but his more than unbearable manner of uttering them that roused my ire and brought me to the point of action. Had he been nearer, I would have served him with my fist as I had served Lounsbury, and would have regretted it at once for its lack of dignity. Forgetting for the moment my assumed role, I stood where he had found me, and answered:

"Capt. Scammell, my calling is the sea. You are but a marauding bushwhacker, nor can the curse be rubbed off you by a title or hidden by fine trappings, and did you but know it you would be honored by crossing swords with me. As for an explanation, I will satisfy you so far as to say that I punished your friend for insulting me, and, by the God above me, if you wish to carry this further, I will punish you worse than I did him! I could but defend myself from him, a boy whose back I could break across my knee, so he goes harmless. As for you, I will fight you within the hour and ask for no second."

"Good!" he broke in. "You gave the name to the weapon. Let it be swords, and at once. Remember," he went on with an oath, and working himself into a rage, "ask no quarter of me. Up or down I give no mercy; let a l'outrance be the word."

"Nay," said I, fanned to an equal heat by his blood-thirsty manner and the fury in his eye—"nay, then, I will not kill you; villain as you are, but I should I disarm you, or you slip. I will beat you with the flat of my sword until you rear for quarter, or I break every bone in your foul hide! 'Twill be scant mercy, as you were better killed outright. Now look to it, for this I will do, or my name is not Thorne—Lounsbury!"

I caught myself just in time, and started violently as I discovered the trip of my tongue. Both the others likewise gave a jump, but it immediately transpired that each had a different cause.

It was Scammell who first showed his reason for thus starting, and that was through the insult I had offered him in degrading him by a threatened beating. White with rage, he threw aside the blade, and drawing his heavy saber, advanced on me with a torrent of oaths.

Before I could do more than whip my left arm out of its sling and lift the bulky table in defense (for I was unarmed), the young officer sprang between us.

"Hold hard, Scammell!—Lounsbury! Are you Capt. Lounsbury? Lounsbury, of Rye? By my faith! but I came near making a bull of it!—This thing can go no further now, Scammell. I've been looking for the man high and low for week. Clinton wants him at once! at once! The order comes from headquarters. What, man! Hold hard!"

"Hold hard yourself!" shouted the toady, as he tried to dodge the young officer. "No further now! Do you think I'll brook such words to my face and wait for formalities? Ay, Lounsbury it is; and of Rye and the phantom and the devil, for aught I care! What can Clinton want with such a man? Stand aside, you salt fish, and let me meet him!"

"Call me no fish, you butcher-bird!" snapped Belden. "What ails your humor to-day? Has the heat gotten your head? You first pick my own quarrel away from me, and then flout me for looking to my own interests. Has the fair Gertrudehipped you, that you speak so quickly? I tell you my orders are imperative."

"For God, you sprat! An' you dare twit me in public on my private affairs!" shouted the toady, turning his wrath on the naval officer. "Use but her name again, and I'll spit you as you stand, you half a man! How! Will you, too, fight?"

Stung by his words, and more than stung by the reference to his short stature, Belden had whipped out the sword he had sheathed and thrown himself into the fencer's attitude.

"Fight? Ay, I'll fight! Put aside that meat ax and use a gentleman's tool. I'll show you that half a man is better than a whole brute. My wrist is as fine as yours, for all your brawn."

That Scammell's blood had o'ercome his brain was plainly apparent by the way he threw his heavy saber to the ground and ran toward the card-sharper. But that fellow, anticipating his wants, brought up the point of the weapon which he still held, and presenting it at the breast of the oncoming, retreated a few steps and cried out:

"Nay, nay! Ye shall not have it. Settle yer brawl as best ye may, but my sword is mine, an' with me it shall bide. By the look of it, ye must settle with the three of us. Pull out of the pickle, an' ye can; ye shall have no help or steel of me."

Now while this was going on I had not been idle with either brain or body. I saw at once that Lounsbury had become a personage of importance, and that he was unknown to Clinton by sight. That something of moment was on hand was also discovered, and it evidently lay in my power to thwart the matter and confound the British. At the same time, it would probably spread open a path for me to leave the city, and possibly in some manner show me a way to lay hands on my gold. It was a fair chance to act upon, and I could in no wise let harm come to the young sailor until I knew more or had been piloted on my way.

This was with my head. With my body I simply moved to where lay Scammell's saber, and picked it up.

As I did so, the baffled officer turned and saw the action. Foiled at every point, and now unarmed and compassed by three armed men, he swore and fumed like a baited animal.

I saw the folly of his total loss of temper, for had he not parted with it he never would have been placed in his present position. He had quarreled and well-nigh fought with three men in as many minutes, while his blind fury had brought him to where he was worsted and degraded at once.

As he stood there, too proud to retreat and unable to advance, he glanced hastily in every direction. In his desperation he was doubtless looking for his horse and his pistols in the holsters, and had he found them there would have been bloodshed. But his high-spirited animal, frightened at my act of swinging aloft the table and the talk at once and gone galloping from the yard, now being nowhere in sight.

And thus we stood for perhaps the space of half a minute (though it seemed longer), while at a distance gathered a number who had been drawn hither by the noise of the brawl. 'Twas a mighty awkward predicament for Scammell, but Belden finally put a period to the matter, and opened a way for the toady to retreat. Slipping the point of his sword into its scabbard, he thrust it down with a ring, and cried:

"Avast, all hands! We're nothing short of a pack of fools. Each of us has had a thrust at his neighbor, and each in turn has stood between two others. 'Tis the prettiest mus I ever saw, so d—n me! 'Twas all beginnings and devil of an ending. Let's make it up—Come, Scammell, you might well go halfway to meet half a man. By my faith, that's not bad—Lounsbury, I was a bullock myself, and ask pardon for the bottle. So there's my sop—Who's next?"

Now my heart warms to a man who is quick to take fire, whose wrath is like the touch of a match to gunpowder, the force of which is gone when its work is done; just as I hate the sullen spirit of one who nurses the last spark and sulks until its heat dies for lack of fanning.

The generosity of the boy—for he was little else—struck home to me, and I was about offering my hand, when Scammell, quick to take advantage of the turn of affairs, spoke up:

"So let it be if you say so, Belden! I am overhot from the ride from the outer lines at Kingsbridge. I'll willingly pass you and you'll follow"—indicating the trickiest way a jerk of his head—"but I'll not be quits with your new protegee save but for the time you need him. If Clinton wants him, I'll spare him the while to do his dirty work, for on honorable matters he would ne'er employ such a man while his betters go begging. How now, sirrah?" he continued, turning and advancing toward me. "You are glad enough to accept the respite, I doubt not. Will you name time and place to receive your deserts?"

"Two sprawling in the dirt."

"'Tis against my nature to duel in cold blood; but, as my word is passed, I'll carry through my promise. Where do you put up?"

"At the King's Arms, truckler!"

"Then, sir, you lie close to the rod, for there I stay also. For the time to meet you, that must rest with Sir Henry. For the place, that your howls be not heard by your fellows, I make it the elump of trees in Lepner's Meadows (an extensive tract of drained swamp-land beyond the then city limits, through about the center of which now runs the present Canal street). You doubtless know the spot. As to the hour, I will enlighten you at your quarters as soon as may be—Now, Mr. Belden, I am at your disposal. Shall we get to headquarters?"

Saying this, I threw to the ground the toady's saber and turned from him. Instead of stooping for his side arm, Scammell stepped around so as to again be before me, and, though there was no abatement to the malicious hatred in his eye, his voice fell to a hoarse whisper as he said:

"By my faith, sir, it were better you had stood and been run through than to have put into my hand the matter you have just given me! More than that. It were better that you had the devil and his horde against you than Walter Scammell!"

And bending, he picked up his saber, sheathed it, threw a careless salute to Belden, and walked off, the card-sharper joining the throng about the tavern door.

CHAPTER VI.

A FAIR PROSPECT.

Left alone with Belden, that worthy looked me over slowly, and then holding out his hand, said:

"On my soul, Lounsbury, you had best shrieve yourself! To tell the truth, I'm mightily afraid of that fellow, who is no less the brute I called him because I offered to cry quits. He would be invincible with a rapier, only he holds the light weapon with too tight a hand. He is all points and tricks, and, unless you disarm him, it looks to go hard with you. You will never get by his guard."

"Thanks," said I, laughing, and taking his hand. "I've a trick or two myself. What does the general want with me now?"

"I have but a fraction of the matter, and know my place too well to talk of it. Let us step out; but, man, you'll never appear at headquarters in such a rig! You would be barred at the door!"

"'Tis but the service of a razor and a shift of clothes I need, and will scougehave. Will you bear me company to my lodgings?" He agreed to this, and we set out down late Bowery Lane to the Fields, past the provost prison (now the Hall of Records, City Hall Park) and poorhouse, and so along the Broadway, chatting like two old friends as we walked.

'Twas a strange coincidence, I thought, when I found my companion was attached to the Sprite, having been laid up below through a wound received in a duel while in Philadelphia. A jolly, light-hearted, dissipated boy he was, but as rampant a worshiper of royalty as has fallen to my lot to meet.

He could tell me nothing of Mrs. Badely and her ward, Gertrude King (the latter toward whom I had an instinctive leaning), save that they had long ago left the schooner and were in sumptuous quarters on Queen street. Scammell's passion for the young lady was no secret to me, and he made a coarse joke at the expense of both, for which I could have wrung his neck.

But all were alike in those days, it seemed to me, and not once did I hear a woman respectfully spoken of, though the maligners of the sex professed a readiness to lie down and be trodden on when in the presence of the least of the ladies of fashion. Such a fulsome aping of fine manners on the streets and off; such back-bending and courtesying, froth, and hypocrisy; such affectation in speech and attitude; such utter prostration before the god of mode and folly as was practiced by these puppets of the king in this small copy of the court, never before or since has it been the fortune of man to see. Insincerity, heartlessness, and an absurd sensitiveness regarding so-called points of honor ruled the day. And these were the spirits who were expected to subdue the hardy yeomanry of America!

But this is neither here nor there.

Well shorn, with a decent ribbon for my queue, a suit but a shade or two the worse for wear, and a sword at my thigh for effect, we set off for our destination. Belden having washed his dirty face and generally groomed himself.

At this time Clinton's headquarters was on the Broadway, at No. 1, and opposite the Bowling Green, being the same dwelling wherein Washington had established himself while the patriot troops occupied the city.

'Twas strange to me that the British commander should have hit upon this house, not only because of its association, but from the fact that it was, with some few mansions to the north, cut off from the rest of the city by the broad swath of ruin caused by the great fire of September, 1776.

This conflagration had started (God knows how!) near the Whitehall, and, under the fanning of a strong wind, had burned northwest, crossing the Broadway below Trinity church, and from there laying low everything clear to the Hudson and north with the rest, but by some stroke St. Paul's was spared, as well as King's college (Columbia college), the first stopping just short of Robinson street (now Park Place), on which stood the latter.

No attempt had been made to rebuild or even clear the ruins, and now 'twas a dangerous neighborhood, as the outcroppings of the camp had taken possession of the whole area, and utilizing old walls, beams, and sails, had established a colony of violence and filth, which went by the name of Canastown.

GLADSTONE'S CORRECTNESS.

The Grand Old Man Was on All Occasions the Essence of Propriety.

Gladstone had a horror of indelicacies of all kinds much like that of Gen. Grant. It was often said in England to a person who had told an anecdote with ever so slight a tinge of impropriety: "How many thousands of pounds would you take to tell that to Gladstone?" Again, he had a rooted aversion to profiting, directly or indirectly, by his public opportunities. He was an innovating finance minister. Constantly was his active intelligence rearranging the details and incidence of taxation. A hint from him would have meant a fortune; yet no man ever got it. "No mysterious secrets were ever offered for sale, as coming from him," it is written of him, "in exchange or bourse. Slight suspicion asserted many incredible things of him, but the most wanton slanderer never dared suggest that anyone in his entourage or intimacy ever profited a penny by a look, a list, a gesture from him when in office."

He would never allow his name to be used in any business enterprises. In the house of commons when announcement of his death was made Sir William Harcourt choked and could not finish his speech. "Of all chiefs," he said, emphatically, "he was the most kind, the most tolerant, the most placable." In the house of lords, too, where Lord Rosebery made a passing reference to Mr. Gladstone's last letter, penned with almost dying hands, to Lady Salisbury, expressing his personal sympathy after the carriage accident to Lord Salisbury, the premier himself, bowed with age and many burdens, wept like a child. As one newspaper well says: "Such tears give salt to public life in England." Mr. Balfour, who was an intimate and admiring friend of Gladstone's, though his political foe, personally induced Mrs. Gladstone to allow her husband to be buried among England's great ones at Westminster. His body will therefore rest in the Abbey, in "Statesmen's Corner," and in effigy, as in life, Mr. Gladstone will stand side by side with Peel and facing Disraeli, his lifelong political antagonist.—Troy Times.

A Modest Request.

When the old lady with the ear trumpet called little Bessie entertained her till the lady of the house was ready to put in an appearance. While telling about her recent presents and the health of her several dolls, Bessie eyed the trumpet curiously and finally could restrain herself no longer.

THE CONSPIRACY TRIAL.

MM. Deroulede, Guerin and Buffet Have Been Found Guilty—The Others Released.

Paris, Jan. 4.—The conspiracy trial before the senate sitting as the high court came to an end Wednesday except for the sentences in the cases of those convicted. Out of the 75 alleged conspirators who were thrown into prison five months ago and who have been since released in batches, owing to want of evidence, only MM. Deroulede, Guerin and Buffet have been found guilty; and these three are accorded "extenuating circumstances" which reduces their punishment to detention in a fortress or banishment. It is understood that the sentence will vary between five and ten years detention. President Loubet may extend pardons in accordance with the Berenger law in favor of first offenders.

Strong precautionary measures were taken Wednesday in the vicinity of the senate house but there was no sign of disorder anywhere when the judgments were rendered.

All the nationalist organs describe the result of the trial as a fiasco for the government after a flourish of trumpets with which it announced the discovery of a great plot against the republic.

They insist that the whole indictment fizzled out and that the acquittal of M. Buffet's fellow royalists' prisoners disposes of the charge of a royalist conspiracy.

Territorial Government for Hawaii.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The senate committee on foreign relations Wednesday considered a number of pending questions. The bill of Senator Cullom, providing a territorial government for Hawaii was discussed, but the sub-committee which has the subject under consideration not being ready to report, it was announced that another meeting would be held soon, when the bill would be reported to the full committee.

American Naval Officers Honored.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The Venezuela government has conferred the order of the "Bust of Bolivar" on Adm. Sampson, Capts. Taylor, Cook, Sigbee, Chadwick, Goodrich and Commanders Mead, Dayton, Symonds and Todd, of the navy, and Representative Hitt has introduced a bill authorizing the acceptance of the decorations.

For Boer Widows and Orphans.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Jan. 4.—John Sketee, vice consul to the Netherlands, Wednesday forwarded to Holland a draft for 9,200 guilders, Grand Rapids' Hollanders' latest contribution for the widows and orphans of Boers killed in South Africa. The sum amounts to $3,708, American money.

Engineer Killed.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 4.—David Wright, an engineer of the Chicago & Northwestern road, stood in the gangway of his locomotive as it entered a curve near Bertram Wednesday, and as the engine swayed he was thrown to the ground and killed. Engineer J. F. Fiske, who fell similarly from his engine at Mechanicsville a few days ago, died Wednesday.

Will Not Stop at Honolulu.

San Francisco, Jan. 4.—Until all danger of a spread of the plague now prevalent in Honolulu is past transports leaving this port for the Philippines will not stop there, as has been the general custom, but will go straight through to their destination, taking sufficient food with them from here to last the entire trip.

Treasurer Hershey's Defalcation. Lancaster, Pa., Jan. 4.—It is believed that the defalcation of Emanuel H. Hershey, the absconding county treasurer, will amount to more than $65,000, at first disclosed, further failures to record tax collections having been discovered.

Not a Candidate.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Senator Allen, of Nebraska, in an interview Tuesday night, authorized an absolute denial of reports that he would be the candidate for the presidency of a part of the fusion forces.

HE WANTED THE TROUSERS.

Which Accounted for His Inability to Remove the Grease Spot.

A young fellow on the South side has a negro valet, an old-fashioned southern dandy.

"Here, Jeff; I want those trousers cleaned and pressed to-day," he said, pointing to a rather loud-striped garment that Jeff has long had his eyes on.

"All right, sah," said Jeff, with a sigh. Next morning Jeff brought the trousers back with a big grease spot still prominent on one knee.

"Can't you get that spot out?" said the owner of the trousers.

"No, sah."

"Did you try turpentine?"

"Fo' de Lawd, I done saccharated 'em wid turpentine."

"Did you try coal oil?"

"Yes, sah; po'd a quart o' bile on 'em."

"Did you try a hot iron?"

"Putty nigh bu't 'em up!"

"Did you try benzine?"

"Done tried benzine an' kerosene, and all de other zines, an' 'tain't tech dat grease spot."

"Well, did you try 'em on?" queried the master with a twinkle in his eye.

"Yes, sah," replied Jeff, with alacrity, "an' dey's a putty fit grease spot an' all, sah."—Chicago Inter Ocean.

MILITIA CALLED.

Eight Additional Regiments Have Been Ordered Out by England.

Since Gen. Joubert's Return to the Front Cannonading at Lady-smith is More Lively Than Usual.

Sterkstroom, Cape Colony, Jan. 4.—The Boers attacked Molteno early Wednesday. The action is now proceeding.

Molteno is about twenty miles north of Sterkstroom, where Gen. Gatacre has made his headquarters since his defeat at Stormberg. Its situation at the junction of the East London line and a branch road connecting this with the Port Elizabeth line gives it strategic importance. Gatacre left a garrison at Molteno, which could be easily reinforced.

Sterkstroom, Jan. 3.—Gen. Gatacre today met the invading forces at Cyphergat, near the British advance camp at Bushmanshoek. The Boers retired hurriedly shortly after the British artillery opened fire. The enemy occupied Molteno and Cyphergat to-day but the latter place is now reoccupied by us.

Nauwpoort, Jan. 4.—There was brisk fighting Wednesday in the hills around Colesburg. The Boers stubbornly resisted the British at every point, but gradually retreated. The British held the extreme position to the south and east, overlooking the town.

Cape Colony, Jan. 4.—The hills around Colesburg are numerous, not in ranges but in groups, making it very difficult to hunt the Boers out. Sixteen wounded have arrived at Arundel.

London, Jan. 4.—There is a complete absence of anything new from the seat of war.

The report of the Boer attack on Molteno is not yet confirmed. Apparently Gen. French holds nothing within five miles of Colesburg junction. His request for reinforcements dispels any present hope that he will be able to seize one of the crossings of the Orange river. It is probable that when Lord Roberts arrives Gen. French will be ordered to quit his present unsupported position and to concentrate his command at De Aar or Orange River. As the Daily Telegraph says, Gen. French "seems to be in the position of a man having a tiger cat in a trap and unable to kill it for want of a stick."

A dispatch from Dover Farm announces that Lieut. Col. Pilcher has returned there safely from Douglas. Since Commandant Gen. Joubert's return to the front the cannonading of Ladysmith by the Boers has been much livelier. Between December 18 and 29 four shells killed one officer and 13 men and wounded 13 officers and 11 men.

The war office acknowledges the inferiority of the regular artillery by authorizing the equipment of the new battery attached to the London volunteer corps with Vickers and Maxim, some of which the Boers use, and by ordering 100 of these 12½-pounder quick fire guns built immediately. The officers and men of the new battery will be supplied from the Honorable artillery company.

Eight additional militia regiments have been called out. Seven of these will serve in Ireland, replacing the regulars sent to South Africa.

Hon. Sidney Robert Greville, equerry to the Prince of Wales, has obtained the prince's permission to go to the front.

Recently he has been acting as Lord Salisbury's secretary instead of Schomburg McDonnell, who has gone to South Africa.

Among the announcements of those who volunteered Tuesday appear the names of a hundred or more sons of gentlemen.

The papers comment upon the fact that in view of the state of public opinion, it is much easier to go to war than to stay at the clubs, which wear a particularly deserted aspect.

All parts of England Scotland report lively volunteering, a leading feature being the great sums raised by private subscription for volunteer equipment. Some of the counties have given sums as high as £30,000. It is computed that the provinces have already raised nearly £600,000, while London is raising £120,000 for the city troops.

Frere Camp, Jan. 3.—Capt. Thorneycroft's patrol found the enemy in some force at the little Tugela bridge. Their presence was discovered by scouts. It is reported that five men and a lieutenant of the party have not returned.

Ex-Adj. Marsh to Return.

Lansing, Mich., Jan. 4.—Telegrams were received Wednesday from Arthur Marsh, ex-adjutant of the Michigan and chairman of the republican state committee, stating that he was about to leave Brockport, N. Y., for Lansing to plead to the indictment found against him in connection with the alleged military state clothing. Nothing has been learned yet as to Gen. White's whereabouts.

PORTO RICAN LAWS.

Foraker Introduces a Plan for the Better Government of the Island.—Gage's Banking Plan.

Washington, Jan. 4.—Representative Culver, of New York, offered a resolution in the house Wednesday calling upon Secretary of the Treasury Gage to furnish the house with all letters, agreements, papers, or documents between the treasury department and the National city bank, of New York, since the fourth day of March, 1897, relating to the depositing of public funds in said bank. The resolution was referred to the committee on ways and means.

Information is also wanted as to the amount of public money deposited with said banks by the government and for what length of time and return therefor, and whether said banks have paid the government any interest on said deposits, and how much.

Senator Foraker Wednesday introduced a bill providing a form of government for the island of Porto Rico. The bill provides for the continuance of the law and municipal ordinances now in force in the island, until the legislature shall supplement them. The president is empowered to appoint a governor and supreme court, to have charge of the island, and also seven heads of departments to have charge of the various interests of the government and also five native citizens, who, together with the governor and heads of departments, are to constitute the upper branch of insular legislature. A lower house of 35 members, to be elected by citizens, is also provided, and all inhabitants of the island are made citizens of the United States, and are also to elect a delegate to congress. The island is to be divided into five districts for judicial and legislative purposes, and each district is to have a local court, to consist of such a number of judges as the legislature may provide for.

The constitution and laws of the United States are extended to the island and so far as the latter are locally applicable. Export duties are prohibited, and free trade is provided for between the island and the United States proper. Articles imported into Porto Rico from other countries than the United States are to pay the same duties as those imposed in the ports of this country.

The money thus collected is to go into the island treasury, but money realized from the internal revenue collection is to be covered into the national treasury of the United States.

SCARE AT MANILA.

The Dreaded Bubonic Plague Has Appeared in the Philippines—Three Cases Reported.

Manila, Jan. 4.—The health officers have found a native with all the symptoms of bubonic plague in a house in the walled city, where two suspicious deaths have occurred. The patient has been isolated, and every precaution has been taken to prevent a spread of the disease.

Washington, Jan. 4.—The war department is making steps to prevent the introduction of the plague in the Philippines, and Secretary Root Wednesday morning called into consultation Surgeon General Wyman, of the marine hospital service, to discuss the establishment of a quarantine system for the islands. It was decided that the war department should adopt towards the Philippines a policy like it pursued towards Cuba in the matter of the protection of health, namely, confine the maintenance of a quarantine system to the marine hospital service. The report received by both the state department and by Surgeon General Wyman from Honolulu confirm the press dispatches relative to the existence of the disease. It happens fortunately that the marine hospital service has already two quarantine points in the Philippines, while two of its surgeons are now on their way to Manila, so that little delay will be encountered in beginning to draw rigid quarantine line in the islands.

Surgeon General Wyman does not feel apprehensive as to the possibility of the infection of San Francisco from Honolulu.

Hanna Will Not Be Chairman.

Cleveland, O., Jan. 4.—Senator Hanna declared Wednesday that although he had been urged to stand for the permanent chairmanship of the next republican national convention he would not do so. "There are other men," he said, "who are more ambitious than I and who value that honor more than I do. I will give way to them." He also declared that he will not be one of the delegates at large from Ohio in the convention.

Reformed Spelling Adopted.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—The University of Chicago will use and advocate the new spelling. By a vote of 20 to 16 the university congregation placed itself on record Wednesday as favoring the use of the reformed spelling adopted by the National Education association. The vote implies the use of the reform spelling in a number of magazines and papers issued under the auspices of the university.

Death of Wm. H. Putnam.

New York, Jan. 4.—William H. Putnam, the undertaker who conducted the funeral of Henry Clay at Washington and Ashland, Ky., and Daniel Webster at Marshfield, Mass., is dead at his home in this city, aged 81 years. He was a lineal descendant of Gen. Israel Putnam, the revolutionary hero.

Speaker Trimble will announce his committee to-morrow. J. T. Hinton, of Bourbon, will be Chairman of Public Charities.

The New York World, Thrice-a-Week Edition.

Almost a Daily—At the Price of a Weekly.

The most widely circulated "weekly" newspaper in America is the Thrice-a-Week edition of The New York World, and with the Presidential campaign now at hand you can not do without it. Here are some of the reasons why it is easily the leader in dollar a year journalism.

It is issued every other day, and is so all purposes a daily.

Every week each subscriber receives 18 pages and often during the "busy" season 24 pages each week.

The price is only $2.00 per year.

It is virtually a daily at the price of a weekly.

Its news covers every known part of the world. No weekly newspaper could stand a lone and furnish such service.

The Thrice-a-Week World has at its disposal all of the resources of the greatest newspaper in existence—"America's Greatest Newspaper," as it has been justly termed—The New York World.

Its political news is absolutely impartial. This fact will be of especial value in the Presidential campaign coming on.

The best of current fiction is found in its columns. These are only some of the reasons; there are others. Read it and see them all.

We offer this unequalled paper, and The BOUREON News together one year for $2.50.

The regular subscription price of the

Gov. Taylor's Message.

The following are main features of Gov. Taylor's message which was read Wednesday in the Legislature:

Repeal the Goebel Election Law. Erection of a new capitol building to cost $500,000.

A state prison exclusively for women, to be run entirely by women.

A dormitory for girls at the State A. and M. College, Lexington.

Reference is made to the burning of Coleman, at Maysville, and mobs are deplored.

More school houses in the State. Wants the law so changed that a whole county may be taxed to build school school houses in districts.

Repeal of the present penitentiary law is urged.

Strict anti-cigarette law. Local option regulated strictly by counties instead of by districts.

Amendments to the constitution be submitted to the people allowing cities to regulate their own municipal taxation.

The message is printed on page seven.

Bryan Coming To Kentucky.

HON. W. J. BRYAN has written to Senator J. C. S. Blackburn that he is coming to Kentucky on January 16 to see him elected United States Senator. Mr. Bryan will be invited to make a speech before the Legislature, and will have something to say of the contests now before the Legislature. Mr. Bryan will remain in Frankfort for two days, and will probably be given a banquet.

Grocery Burglarized.

BURGULARS entered the grocery of George Parris Tuesday night and stole several hams, some sugar and lard, and almost a barrel of coal oil. When Mr. Parris left the store that night everything was securely locked and fastened, and the next morning the door was found locked and the window was secured just as he left it the night before. He thinks the store was entered by means of a duplicate key. The police think they have spotted the guilty party.

Increase in Postal Business.

THE gross receipts of the Paris postoffice for the year just closed show an increase of a thousand dollars over the previous year. The receipts for the last quarter were $2,567, and if this average continues during the year Paris will be entitled to free delivery.

Free delivery would compel the government to furnish a building for the postoffice, and furnish three superintendents at the office and two carriers.

Free delivery would be a great convenience for the citizens and it is hoped that the local office will be entitled to it before very long.

Deputy Postmaster Stivers tells THE NEWS that there is hardly a vacant box in the office and that the office is in a very healthy condition.

Handsome New Ambulance.

MR. J. T. HINTON has just added to his superb undertaking equipment a handsome ambulance, which is the finest in Kentucky. Mr. Hinton gave the order for the ambulance to Mr. Frank Woolall some eight months ago, and it is the largest and one of the finest ambulances ever made by the firm of Crane & Breed, of Cincinnati. The ambulance has plate glass sides, beautifully draped with silk, and the wheels are fitted with heavy rubber tires, which makes it especially desirable for moving sick or injured persons from one place to another. This ambulance was built to special order and is certainly a handsome vehicle. Mr. Hinton has also added two newly furnished carriages to his undertaking equipment, which is second to none in Kentucky.

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centered and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillful dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Every Month

there are thousands of women who nearly suffer death from irregular menses. Sometimes the "period" comes too often—sometimes not often enough—sometimes the flow is too scant, and again it is too profuse. Back symptoms show that Nature needs help, and that there is trouble in the organs concerned. Be careful when in any of the above conditions. Don't take any and every nostrum advertised to cure female troubles.

BRADFIELD'S FEMALE REGULATOR

is the one safe and sure medicine for irregular or painful menstruation. It cures all the ailments that are caused by irregularity, such as leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, nervousness, pains in the head, back, breasts, shoulders, sides, hips and limbs. By regulating the menses so that they occur every twenty-eight days, all these aches disappear together. Just before your time comes, get a bottle and see how much good it will do you. Druggists sell it at $1.

It cures coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, pneumonia, grippe and throat and lung troubles. Its early use prevents consumption. It is the only harmless remedy that gives immediate results. W. T. Brooks.

Lewis Denson, Salem, Ind., says "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure did me more good than anything I ever took." It digests what you eat and can not help but cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. W. T. Brooks.

STYLISH shoes that fit comfortable and are worth the price can always be found at Davis, Thomson & Lagrie's. Nothing more useful for a holiday present. Take a look whether you buy or not.

F. B. Thirkield, Health Inspector of Chicago, says, "Kodol Dyspepsia Cure can not be recommended too highly. It cured me of severe dyspepsia." It digests what you eat and cures indigestion, heartburn and all forms of dyspepsia. W. T. Brooks.

Foul-Smelling Catarrh.

Catarrh is one of the most obstinate diseases, and hence the most difficult to get rid of. There is but one way to cure it. The disease is in the blood, and all the sprays, washes and inhaling mixtures in the world can have no permanent effect whatever upon it. Swift's Specific cures Catarrh permanently, for it is the only remedy which can reach the disease and force it from the blood.

Mr. B. P. McAllister, of Harrodsburg, Ky., had Catarrh for years. He writes: "I could see no improvement whatever, though I was constantly treated with sprays and washes, and different inhaling remedies. In fact, I could feel that each winter I was worse than the year previous. Finally it was brought to my notice that Catarrh was blood disease, and after thinking over the matter, I saw it was unreasonable to expect to be cured by remedies which only reached the surface. I then decided to try Swift's Specific. Continuing the remedy, the disease was forced out of my system, and a complete cure was the result. I advise all who have this dreadful disease to abandon their local treatment, which has never done them any good, and take S. S. S., a remedy that can reach the disease and cure it."

To continue the wrong treatment for Catarrh is to continue to suffer. Swift's Specific is a real blood remedy, and cures obstinate, deep-seated diseases, which other remedies have no effect whatever upon. It promptly reaches Catarrh, and never fails to cure even the most aggravated cases.

S. S. S. For the Blood is Purely Vegetable, and is the only blood remedy guaranteed to contain no dangerous minerals.

pampered youth. The second time he appeared distinctly grateful. On the third he asked permission to call, and I went home at peace with all the world, even Fred.

For five consecutive afternoons after that I sat by the tea table in the back drawing room, attired in my best gown, expecting Perceval—in vain.

On the sixth he came. "What a delightful surprise," I said gushingly. I was a trifle nervous from waiting so long.

"Ah, thanks," he remarked, looking disappointed.

And then mamma came in and in spite of my previous warnings finished things by treating Mr. Jones as if he were Albert Edward or Mark Hanna or at least a royal duke. Mamma never could resist a millionaire.

Our visitor took his leave in less than half an hour, and I knew that unless I adopted desperate measures Perceval Jones was lost to me forever.

But I'm not one to give up easily, and after thinking hard I hit on a plan and went to sleep at daybreak and slept till noon as sweetly and as innocently as a child.

Early in the afternoon I telephoned to Maud and asked her to go with me out to the golf links at 4 o'clock. Then I telephoned to Fred to meet us there and proceeded to make a fetching toilet with a light heart. When we reached the links, there was Mr. Jones (he had mentioned that he was going the day before).

He was looking bored, as usual, but cheered up when I treated him with haughty coldness.

I eluded his attempts at conversation, however, and threw Maud in his way whenever I could.

I was rewarded by seeing him seat himself by Maud's side and commence a disquisition on Ibsen as Fred came around the hill on his bicycle.

No sooner did Fred's eye light on the couple than he commenced to glare like a madman, and in spite of my innocent efforts to keep him away he wound up by being so outrageously rude to Mr. Jones that that gentleman was confounded, and Maud went home in tears.

As for me, I went to bed happy. My plan was working to a charm.

A day or two later I got mamma to ask Mr. Jones to dinner and managed to have him take Maud out. That settled it. Fred treated Perceval in such an insulting manner that even he could hardly overlook it, and he left early, to mamma's distress and my secret joy.

After that I began to meet Perceval every time I went out of the house. No matter whether I walked or drove or rode a wheel I was sure to encounter him before long, and he would escort me on my way, leaving me always on our return at the end of the street leading to our house.

"Since your brother, who is your guardian, dislikes me so, I cannot go to your home," he would say regretfully, and I would blush and stammer an apology. "But I must see you in spite of him," Perceval would add with a melting glance, and I would go home in the seventh heaven.

At last after three weeks of this surreptitious courtship Perceval could stand it no longer.

"Be my wife, Rosamond!" he cried one day. "Never mind what they say at home. I must have you. I never knew what love was before."

Poor boy, he had never known the bliss of trying for what he wanted. Before this it had always dropped into his lap.

But I couldn't trust him even then. "Oh, no!" I said timidly. "I dare not. Fred would kill you if he thought of such a thing."

"Let him try," said Perceval valiantly. "I'll have you in spite of him. See, here is the minister on his porch, Rosamond. Come, darling, he will give me the right to claim you from your brother."

And before I knew what I was about I found myself in the minister's parlor being married in a bicycle skirt and pink cotton shirt waist.

Ten minutes later I walked into Fred's office, leaving Perceval waiting outside, looking a little pale about the gills, but with a combative gleam in his eye.

"Fred," I remarked coolly as I looked up my brother square in the face, "I want to thank you for what you've done for me. I'm Mrs. Perceval Jones, by your leave."

Then a smile of incredulous relief spread over his face.

"Gosh!" he ejaculated. "To think that the fellow actually wanted you!"—Chicago Times-Herald.

August Flower.

"It is a surprise to me," says Prof. B. H. Bunker, "that in my travels in all parts of the world, for the last ten years, I have met more people having used Green's August Flower than any other remedy, for dyspepsia, indigestion, liver and stomach, and for constipation. I find for tourists and soldiers, or for persons filling office positions, where irregular habits exist, that Green's August Flower is a good remedy. It does not injure the system by frequent use, and is excellent for sour stomachs and indigestion." Sample bottles free at J. A. Wilson's. Sold by dealers in all civilized countries.
